ESCAPE IF YOU CAN

BY FREDERICK JACKSON

SYNOPSIS: Bigelow, young American-born Parisian, comes to New York in response to his own appeal that he check on a Count Vronski whom her step-daughter Anna may marry. On the ship Bigelow meets the exotic looking Russian dancer, Karanaskoff, who shows veiled interest when he mentions Vronski. Arriving at his hotel, Bigelow glimpses an attractive girl on her way to a man's room. Next day he has tea with his aunt and meets Anna, recognizing her as the girl at the hotel. They arrange a dinner party, including Vronski and Karanaskoff.

Chapter Six

Cocktails With Karanaskoff

ALTHOUGH Anna was in silver with a chinchilla wrap and looked radiant, it was not so much as her as Count Vronski that Bigelow looked when they arrived. And he was conscious of a feeling of disappointment.

The man did not look dangerous at all. He was not even very handsome. A well set-up fellow, very fair, with fair hair that he wore rather short and a well curled mustache. His cheek bones were high, his eyes were blue, a not very unusual Slavic type, he had no suggestion of intelligence or even of goodness about him. He might have been a soldier. He carried himself like one.

"We've reserved a table at Madge Forrester's," Anna announced. "I wouldn't know her. She used to practically support night club before the crash. But they lost their money and now she acts as hostess and runs one herself. We all go there. It's a good spot."

"Seems to me I've seen her in Paris," said Bigelow as he gave them drinks.

"It's possible. She's been there," smiled Anna.

"What does she do? Dance or sing?" he asked.

"Nothing. Just draws the crowd," explained Anna. "People go because they like her, really. She has a few good entertainers, of course, but they're of secondary importance."

"You have not been in New York in a long time?" asked Vronski.

"Once I, too, preferred Paris," the Russian assured him. "But that was before I had discovered New York. Paris is no longer gay."

"There are not so many Americans there as there used to be," admitted Bigelow.

"That is what I meant," smiled Vronski. He had strong white teeth that gleamed when he smiled and he smiled almost too much. Bigelow was aware of a faint antagonism stirring in him and he began to understand how Mrs. Phelps had felt. The mystery of Anna's attitude toward the man, Bigelow could not fathom it.

She was different tonight, cooler, harder. And she seemed older. He wondered if this was the front she usually presented to the world, or if it was merely the side of her which Vronski brought out.

Eyes On Vronski

HE got his hat and coat when they had finished their drinks and they went on to pick up Karanaskoff.

"You never met Madame Karanaskoff in Paris?" Bigelow asked when they were in Anna's car.

"No, I was never so lucky," answered Vronski. "I never even saw her dance, but she dances well, I hear."

"She dances very well," Bigelow responded, mechanically. He had been watching Vronski as he mentioned Karanaskoff's name. But Vronski's face had revealed nothing but polite interest. If he had ever met the dancer, Bigelow decided, he was cleverer than he seemed.

At the Carlton, Bigelow announced their names and was invited to ascend. The door of Karanaskoff's suite was opened to them by a middle-aged Russian woman with a sad face and tragic dark eyes. She was in black, with a white apron—obviously Karanaskoff's maid.

"Come in, please," she said carefully in English and stood deliberately aside to let them pass. And though her glance took them all in, it came to rest on Vronski's face with a curious fixed expression. She knew him; that was plain. But she made no sign.

They entered and found Karanaskoff mixing cocktails. She was in black velvet, very plain, clinging to the lines of her slender figure. She had pearls at her throat and in her ears. On one hand gleamed a large square-cut ruby, the exact shade of the rouge on her mouth and the enamel on her nails. The room—done in cool green—formed a perfect background for her and it was filled with big, heavily scented crimson roses.

"Perhaps I shall realize here all my desires," said Karanaskoff.

As Bigelow introduced them, Karanaskoff greeted Anna with a swift smile and turned to Vronski. The smile remained on her lips as he bent over her hand, but there was an enigmatic expression in her eyes now. She knew him, too—Bigelow was sure of it—but she accepted the introduction as though he were a stranger, and Vronski betrayed no recognition by either word or look.

"I have made champagne cocktails," said Karanaskoff turning her back and resuming her task. "I like them best because they go well afterward with champagne." Bigelow detected an undertone of excitement in her voice, but she was completely mistress of herself as she presently smiled at Anna. "Do you like them, too, Miss Phelps?"

"Adore them," declared Anna extravagantly.

"There is nothing to drink I do not like," put in Vronski easily. "That is because you are a Russian," said Karanaskoff. "When one has been reared on vodka, one can drink anything without alarm."

She smiled at Vronski and Bigelow watched them both. He perceived that she was concealing her recognition of him from Vronski himself as well as from the rest of them, and he wondered why this was so. Then he caught Anna's eye and realized that Anna was watching him watch them.

1 Dance With Pantomime

MARIUSHKA is bringing caviar in a moment," said Karanaskoff. "The first thing today I went to find it. But I had no difficulty at all. This New York is wonderful. Already I like it very much. Everything that one wishes to have, I cannot tell you. Many times I have been offered contracts and always I said, 'No, no, no!' only because I could not bear to leave Paris."

"You will like New York better than Paris," said Vronski. "You will find it much more gay."

"Yes, perhaps I shall realize here all my desires," said Karanaskoff.

"I have made champagne cocktails," said Karanaskoff turning her back and resuming her task. "I like them best because they go well afterward with champagne." Bigelow detected an undertone of excitement in her voice, but she was completely mistress of herself as she presently smiled at Anna. "Do you like them, too, Miss Phelps?"

"Adore them," declared Anna extravagantly.

"There is nothing to drink I do not like," put in Vronski easily. "That is because you are a Russian," said Karanaskoff. "When one has been reared on vodka, one can drink anything without alarm."

She smiled at Vronski and Bigelow watched them both. He perceived that she was concealing her recognition of him from Vronski himself as well as from the rest of them, and he wondered why this was so. Then he caught Anna's eye and realized that Anna was watching him watch them.

Committees for The K. of C. Ball

At a recent meeting of the Knights of Columbus Assembly, committees were appointed and plans formulated with a view toward making the 18th annual Charity Ball the highlight of its social enterprises. The inspired and enthusiastic general committee pledged itself to exert every effort in order to provide the public who patronize this undertaking with a delightful evening of entertainment and amusement. This fact, together with the knowledge that this affair is conducted in the sole interest of non-sectarian charity, will undoubtedly prove an attraction to all. It is the intention of the decoration committee to prepare the Municipal Auditorium on the night of February 5 with the necessary decorations appropriate to such an occasion.

The various committees, complete at the present time, are operating under the direction of the chairmen listed below:

Honorary chairman, Florian P. Wingert.

General chairman, John J. McGuire.

New Ultra-Violet Floodlight Gets Test as the Killer

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 11 (AP)—A new ultra-violet floodlight which promises to curb flu, the common colds of winter indoors and more dangerous air-borne diseases was set up today for "field" tests on human beings.

The light was developed at the Harvard School of Public Health by William F. and M. W. Wells. It kills flu virus and other disease bacteria. It was ready today to be switched on for the first time, setting up a "barrier" of invisible light across the middle of a hospital corridor. The barrier divides the infectious diseases in one wing of the hospital from those in the other. Nurses can walk through it, but infections can't float through.

The floodlights have been installed in surgical operating rooms in two large eastern cities. They fill the upper portion of the room, above the surgeons' heads, with the germ killing rays.

In a third eastern city, the lights soon will be placed in a hospital babies' room. They will fill the air above the infants' cribs and the nurses without touching the occupants with the dark beams.

In another test, a replica of a railroad car has been built with wall board. In it the light is used to test the possibilities of minimizing risk to passengers in crowded coaches from infections of fellow passengers. It may cut down the danger of spreading infections from city to city.

All these experiments come from the discovery at Harvard Public Health School, announced last July, that flu infection can be transmitted by the air alone; and that the right use of ultra-violet light is a complete protection against this source of flu.

This was the first definite proof in medical history that the air itself can carry infection, other than the droplets of sneezes and the like.

Today's experiments are being made by physicians mostly outside the public health school, who are trying them out under carefully "controlled" conditions. They are the first large scale application of "sanitary control of the air" by physicians.

The Harvard Public Health workers, Mr. and Mrs. Wells, are setting up new lights for the medical men.

The Harvard goal is not only flu and colds, but the more serious situation covered in the U. S. Public Health report that 85 per cent of all deaths due to infection are from those contracted in the nose and throat.

Other diseases which may be in part spread through the air include measles, whooping cough, smallpox, meningitis, mumps, diphtheria, scarlet fever, infantile paralysis, and psittacosis.

FLASHES OF LIFE SKETCHED IN BRIEF

Adverse Result

New York—Nicholas Tucci sat with his family listening to a radio dramatization of a disastrous 1911 fire.

Sirens wailed, bells clanged, people shouted.

A few minutes later fire trucks roared up to put out a blaze in the basement of Tucci's home. Tucci was arrested on a charge of arson after firemen investigated.

Chief Fire Marshal Thomas P. Brophy said Tucci confessed, saying the sound effects on the radio program "did something to me."

The broadcast promoted fire prevention.

Useless Effort

Cincinnati—Patrolman Pat Stull became suspicious when he passed an open door on his beat and heard an elevator start.

He raced upstairs and then back down as the lift shuttled in its shaft, shouting for the "occupants" to come out.

The elevator started up again. "Come on out, or I'll shoot!" Stull shouted.

Other officers came on the scene, explained the elevator was empty automatic elevator, and a defective switch was causing the trouble.

Quick Response

Amesbury, Mass.—The Rev. Leon A. Dean wanted increased attendance at the Main Street Congregational Church.

On the first Sunday of 1937, he offered free taxi service to and from church for any unable to walk.

There could no longer be any excuse for non-attendance, he explained.

Only 12 persons took advantage of the offer yesterday, but the church was well filled.

Hero

Sturgeon Bay, Wis.—Frank Scron, Wisconsin's oldest fire chief, has effectively scotched an incipient rumor that he will retire because of old age.

Chief Scron, 64 years old, beat his crew to a blazing house and carried an unconscious mother and her two children to safety down a ladder.

Weather Item

Lincoln, Neb.—For Billy McArdle, bars do not a prison make.

McArdle, on parole, received permission to re-enter the Nebraska State Penitentiary to which he was committed in 1934 for cattle stealing.

McArdle resumed his job as prison barber, glad by his own admission to escape Nebraska's sub-zero cold wave.

At The Theatres

Today

Broadway: "Slowdown." Shirley Temple goes oriental in her latest opus, with songs by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel, direction by William A. Selter and production worries handled by B. G. DeSylva and Earl Carroll. The story tangles with excitement, humor and songs and Miss Temple plays the role of an orphaned little waif on the loose in Shanghai who becomes a stowaway on a liner under strange circumstances. Through her efforts, a bored bachelor is taught the meaning of love, some comical situations develop and the whole picture parades through entertaining reel after reel to reach the expected happy ending. Here is a show that will appeal to young and old and the little star's cast includes such big names as Robert Young, Alice Faye, Eugene Pallette, Helen Westley, Arthur Treacher, Astrid Allwyn and the Honorable Wu.

Kingston: "Come and Get It." Edward Arnold, long knocking at the door of cinema greatness, achieves his goal in the drama at the Kingston for Mr. Arnold gives a brilliant performance in the role of a chore boy who becomes a lumber baron of almost legendary power and wealth. Taken from Edna Ferber's novel, the screen version has both virility and reality. A father and son motif runs through most of the film to form the plot structure and the whole show is produced on the grand scale with costly sets and a giant cast. Featured players include Joel McCrea, Frances Farmer, Walter Brennan, Frank Shields, Andrea Leeds and Mady Christians. A United Artists picture directed by William Wyler.

Orpheum: "My American Wife" and "Below the Deadline." One of the best movie satires on the pretentious aristocracy of America is being shown at the Orpheum, a grand comedy story of a home grown westerner who comes into a man's life and changes it completely. The show is highly melodramatic and the star.

Tomorrow

Broadway: Same.
Kingston: "Lady from Nowhere" and "Rose Bowl." Deep mystery surrounds the opening attraction at the Kingston for it tells of a strange woman who comes into a man's life and changes it completely. The show is highly melodramatic and the star.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

ring assignment is held by Mary Astor of diary fame. Here is romance, danger and thrill all neatly mixed together. "Rose Bowl." The football season seems to have just begun as far as the cinema is concerned and in the second feature at the Kingston we see the boys fighting it out all over again for All-America honors and a chance for Rose Bowl fame. It's pretty much of a mad college picture but the football shots are as good as any seen on the screen and the action seems to move over the anarcs of the plot without too much tripping. The cast offers Tom Brown, Larry Crabbe, William Frawley, Benny Baker and Eleanor Whitney. A Paramount picture directed by Charles Barton. Orpheum: Same.

Women of New Zealand and the United States are alike in their interests in homemaking, according to Hazel Johnson, extension teacher from New Zealand, who visited the New York State College of Home Economics this month, and observed New York's extension teaching throughout the state and at the college.

PITTED AGAINST BLAZING OIL-WELL

"Smoking Camels helps to keep my digestion in trim," says Patton, oil-well fire-fighter

CLAD in an asbestos suit (left), "Pat" Patton tackles a blazing oil-well. "After that I can tuck away a hearty meal provided I have Camels handy," says Patton, enjoying a hasty bite (right). "Smoking Camels helps keep my digestion in proper trim. And Camels don't get on my nerves." Camels increase the flow of fluids—alkaline digestive fluids so vital to a sense of well-being after eating. Camels are mild!

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos. Turkish and Domestic. Than any other popular brand.

"A BRONX BUSTER takes a terrible jouncing," Alice Greenough (left), explains. "But Camels help me enjoy my food. Smoking Camels with my meals smooths things out for my digestion. I like Camels' mild, delicate flavor."

SPORTS REPORTER AGREES 100% with "Pat" Patton that Camels help digestion along. James Gould (right), speaking: "My job's a strain on nerves and digestion too. And my smoke is the same as 'Pat' Patton's. Camels set me right—give me a cheery lift!"

"CAMELS ARE GRAND at meal-times," says this New York matron, Mrs. Vincent Murray. "I smoke them during meals and afterwards."

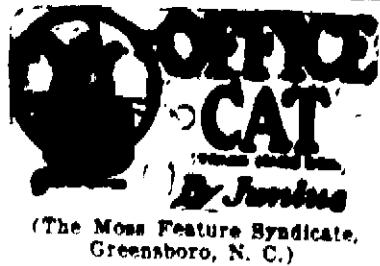

ALL-AMERICAN Hockey Star, Phil La Bette says: "Good digestion and healthy nerves are 'musts' in this game. So I smoke Camels."

For Digestion's Sake... Smoke Camels!

Some people shine their shoes carefully for years and have not had a bath for several years.

Air travel will never become popular with us until somebody invents a soft way to hit the ground.

This is a great life. We learn something today, and tomorrow we find out it was a typographical error.

Every argument has two sides, until we take one. Then the other side disappears.

The trouble with a lot of "good fellows" is that they leave their goodness on the front doorstep when they go home.

Judge—Why did you beat up this man?

Prisoner—Three years ago he told me I had better consult an alienist.

Judge—Then why did you wait until today to hit him?

Prisoner—This morning I happened to find out what an alienist was.

Beware of the fellow who says he loves his fellow man and then tries to make a living at it.

Baggeby—Who do you consider the greatest man this nation ever produced?

Crabshaw—I used to think it was either Lincoln or Jefferson, but now I'm convinced it was my wife's first husband.

Read it or not—

It is said that cream or milk should not be eaten with lobster or pickles. This is a fallacy.

Doctor—My treatment is doing you good. You are looking much better today.

Faint Patient—Oh, I always look much better in this dress.

The stork is one bird that doesn't fly south in winter with the others.

Youth—I've never seen such dreamy eyes.

Sweet Young Thing—You've never stayed quite so late before.

When The Hills Come

Grandpa, I should revere, but tell me, how do you get that way? Why should I look up to you when you left me all these bills to pay?

Snip—Why do you call her "September"?

Snip—Because she was the start of my fall.

Often a preacher could make a greater hit by firing some of his members out of the church than by trying to get new ones in.

Mr. Jinks—They say Slim puts every cent he earns on his wife's back.

Mr. Lyons—Business must be rotten.

If you are smart, people will hate you. If you are stupid, they'll make fun of you. The best plan is to pay no attention to what they say. One way or another.

He—If I were to die you'd never get another husband like me.

She—What makes you imagine I should ever want another like you?

What is it that makes a man who knows his own little business think that makes him an authority on other people's big business.

Time is fleeting, but many people try to beat it.

Officer—What right have you to wear that medal for bravery in combat.

Culprit—Best right in the world, sir. I kicked the fellow it was issued to.

It takes a woman two hours to change her clothes, but only two seconds to change her mind.

Although Miss Dorothy Wallace, secretary of the local, said the governor had "agreed" to address the entire membership, Charles Poletti, his counsel, said "only a small committee" would be seen in the executive offices.

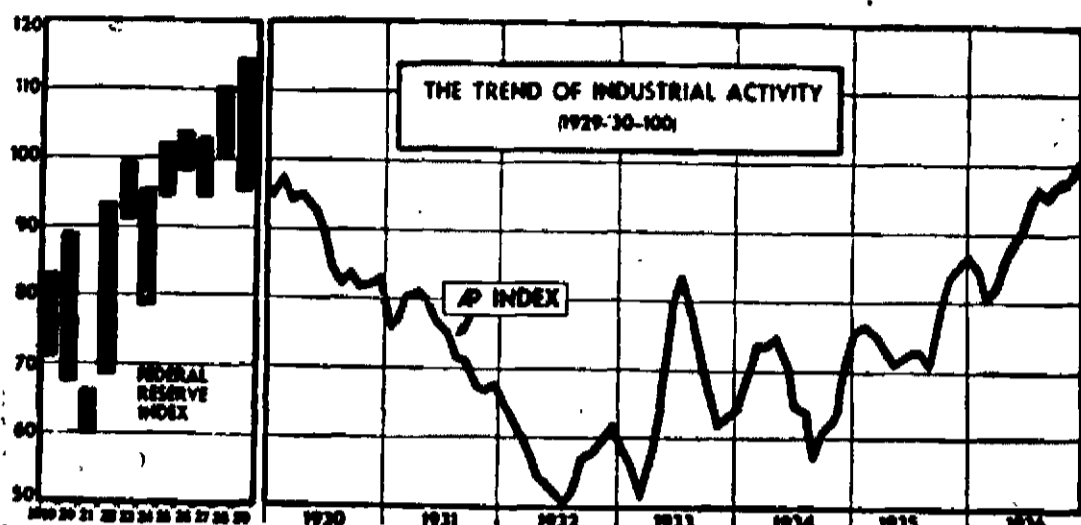

"Puffy, Oh Puffy, wake up—can't you see?"

"Because I'm your friend you must listen to me."

The Jack says to Puffy who opens his eyes.

But can't see a word and just goes to sleep.

Central P. O. Is Now Located in Old Lown Garage

The Central Post Office is now located in the former Lown garage on upper Broadway, near Liberty street. The work of moving the fixtures from the Central Post Office to the new location was done Saturday afternoon by Maynard Mize of the Smith Avenue Storage and Warehouse, and was completed about 5 o'clock with the exception of moving the post office safes which was done on Sunday.

This morning all of the postal business was transacted from the new location where the post office will be located for at least one year while the addition is being built to the Central Post Office.

The Post Office will be a two-story addition built of materials similar to those used in the construction of the Central building. The first floor will be used for post office purposes and the second floor for federal offices. In order to make room for the addition the former Maroon building on Broadway and the two-story frame house on Prince street will be torn down. Both properties were purchased last year by the government.

Finley Has Not Missed a Sunday In 27 Years Here

German Street Resident Rounds Out 27 Years of Consecutive Attendance at Rondout Presbyterian Sunday School—Honored at Service on Sunday.

Alfred Finley of German street has rounded out 27 years of perfect attendance at all of the sessions of the Rondout Presbyterian Sunday School, and the event was honored at the service known as Recognition Sunday in the school on Sunday morning, when he was presented with a book by Superintendent Fred L. Van Deusen.

He is the only member of the Sunday School since it was established over one hundred years ago, who has established a record of perfect attendance for 27 consecutive years, and it speaks well for the remarkable health he has enjoyed in the over a quarter of a century that has elapsed since he as a little boy began attending the Sunday school as a member of the primary department, and was gradually promoted to more advanced classes as the years passed.

During 1936 only two other members of the Sunday school had attended every session of the year. They were Miss Mary Van Allen, one of the school teachers, and Miss Emily Banks. They were also presented with books in honor of the occasion by the superintendent.

But one member of the Sunday school had missed one Sunday, Mrs. Raymond Avery, a teacher in the Sunday school, who missed two Sundays. Those who missed the Rev. James N. Armstrong, Jr., Miss Alice Burns and Miss Alice Wells. Those who missed but three Sundays were Raymond Wolf, Beatrice Joy and John McCullough.

Cat Came Down In a Parachute

Salvatore Pasquale of Hackensack, N. J., had a cat that he desired to rid himself of, and he adopted an unusual plan. He took the cat up with him for an airplane ride on Saturday and shortly after 3 o'clock that afternoon shoppers on Wall street gazing upwards saw what looked like the form of a man dropping earthward all wound up in a white sheet. Two men watched where the descent was made and hurrying to the scene, the O. & W. railroad yard, were amazed to find that the yellow plane had dropped a cat from the plane after attaching the animal to a homemade parachute made of a bed sheet. The animal alighted safely and apparently unharmed. The two men reported the incident to Officer Van Buren who notified police headquarters and the crew of the radio car investigated and learned from Mr. Pasquale that he had adopted that means of ridding himself of the cat whether the cat, after it recovers from its air trip, will decide to make its way back to Hackensack is a matter that is still not solved.

Conferees for 2 Hours

Governor Murphy and conciliator Dewey conferred for two hours last night. Murphy intended to return to Lansing, the state capital, today, but made it clear that he would keep in touch with the situation.

An official source said the governor's return to Lansing did not mean that he was "withdrawing."

"The governor is ready to help and will continue to help both sides at any time," this source told the Associated Press. "Every minute of his time will be available for any move toward settling the strikes."

Martin, when asked if he had asked President Roosevelt to intervene in the labor crisis, said he had "no statement to make."

Wyndham Mortimer, first vice-president of the union, told a meeting of Cleveland Fisher body plant strikers, that the "sit down" strikers in the No. 1 Fisher plant at Flint, Mich., are "prepared to stay there from now on."

In a speech before strikers at Flint Martin charged that "not an automobile company pays a sufficient wage to permit its employees to have a home and feed their families properly."

C. L. McCuen, president of the Olds Motor Works, announced that the Olds and Fisher body plants at Lansing would lay off 8,000 of their 12,000 employees tomorrow night due to the strikes in other plants. There were no strikes in the two Lansing divisions.

Conway Standing on Matter of Principle

his colleagues have every reason to take the stand they have.

Mr. Conway contented himself with saying "I want to make it plain that my position is not that certain of my legislation failed of passage, that I am incensed at the failure of the Republicans in the Assembly to support me. On the contrary I have had experience enough to appreciate the fact that legislators are moved by various reasons in their attitudes toward pending legislation, some of them at least valid and binding as far as they are concerned."

"As far as the Albany county investigation was concerned no one familiar with the facts could have failed to see the need of it and to appreciate its value. Early during the session of the legislature the resolution had the approval of the leaders in the third judicial district. The resolution was approved by State Chairman Melvin Eaton and by others, as the concluding step in a well defined plan."

"I was given to believe I had the active support of the leadership in the Assembly for the furtherance of this legislation. Instead of that when it came to a final show-down I met with their active opposition."

"Outside of the matter of principle and good government involved there is the added thought that when legislation is introduced against which there is no logical or reasonable opposition it is entitled to the support of the leadership temporarily in power."

"Admittedly there is a touch of personal interest involved in that a legislator who takes such treatment without complaint suffers a loss of prestige and consequently becomes of less value to his constituents. As I stated, however, my opposition to Mr. Ives is not based on any ground of personal interest, even though that might be justified. I am standing absolutely on a matter of principle involving the welfare of the Republican party and the welfare of the people of the state of New York."

Roosevelt To Revamp Policy

pendent Legislative Bureau, he suggested Congress take issue with Supreme Court interpretations of labor legislation by moving simultaneously to restrict the court's power by statute and amendment.

Under the projected plan, the 50 congressmen who have proposed constitutional amendments would be asked to explain their views to delegations from the major farm, labor, consumer and business organizations and spokesmen from the states. A vote then would be taken on whether enlargement of federal powers, curtailment of Supreme Court jurisdiction, giving to Congress of a veto power over Supreme Court decisions or some other means would have most chance for success.

Heiselman Seeks Share of Funds

ceived by the county in 1936, I estimate that the residents of Kingston will pay $700,000.00 in these two forms of state taxes during 1937. When this is added to the highway taxes of $324,005.97 enumerated above, we have a total highway tax of over $1,000,000.00 which the people of Kingston will be called upon to pay in 1937.

It seems to me that the residents of Kingston, in paying various highway taxes in excess of $1,000,000.00, are carrying a tremendous burden. They surely are entitled to something substantial in the way of highway improvement for this stupendous sum. In view of these facts, it seems to me, and I hope you will agree, that Kingston is entitled to very special and most generous consideration from the State Highway Department when you make to various cities allotments of federal highway funds at your disposal for the reconstruction of connecting highway links within city limits.

I therefore renew our application for federal aid for the reconstruction of the following connecting links:

"A" Between Federal Route 32 and Federal Route 209 (Boulevard to Hurley avenue, over Washington avenue, a distance of 5,700 ft., 30 ft. between curbs.)

"B" Between Federal Route 32 and Federal Route 9-W (Boulevard over Greenkill avenue to Pine street, to Henry street and from St. James street to Albany avenue, a distance of 2,800 ft., 30 ft. between curbs.)

"C" On Federal Route 209 (Replace concrete pavement from Washington avenue to city line, a distance of 2,300 ft., 40 ft. between curbs, and a distance of 2,450 ft., 20 ft. wide, a total length of 4,750 ft.)

"D" On Federal Route 9-W (Widening McEntee street from Broadway to Wurts street, a distance of 500 ft., 10 ft. between curbs.)

Our engineering department has plans and specifications ready to submit for your consideration. I will appreciate it if you will let me know when we may confer with you concerning the acceptance of these projects for 1937 construction.

Yours truly,
C. J. HEISELMAN, Mayor.

WOMAN'S AILMENTS

MANY women suffer from periodic pains, from nervousness, irritability and discomforts associated with functional disturbances. They should take that vegetable tonic favorably known for nearly 70 years as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It stimulates the appetite and this in turn increases the intake of food, helping to rebuild the body. Mrs. Lucile Hudson of 50 Rockland Place, Rochester, N. Y., said: "After a severe illness the least little excitement would completely upset me. I had lost much weight and never felt like eating. I used two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a tonic and I regained my normal appetite, put on weight and felt just fine in every way." Buy of your druggist.

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD—Character actors get the audience's chuckles and tears but seldom get the top billing.

Here are some of the new ones who appeared for the first time or scored their first hits in pictures of the past year.

Walter Brennan—The toothless young man who gives the most convincing portrait of a portly old age on the screen today. Knocking around Hollywood in bits for years Brennan finally was lifted from obscurity in "Barbary Coast" clinched his position in "Come and Get It," and ran away with "Banjo on My Knee." He is a certain star of 1937.

Mische Auer—This distinguished lean Russian for years a gangster type suddenly did a "monkey act" in "My Man Godfrey," and found himself boomed as a character comedian.

Stars With Quips
John Qualen—His work in "Street Scene" all but forgotten Qualen returned to screen honors in "The Country Doctor" and "Reunion" as the quintuplets' papa E. E. Clive—This veteran English actor made a judge's bit in "A Tale of Two Cities" so delightful he was "discovered" all over again.

Walter Catlett—Overlooked for a time, this old reliable shone forth anew in "Sing Me a Love Song" and "Banjo on My Knee."

Akum Tamiroff—From a small role in "China Seas" Tamiroff built a ladder of characterizations topped by "The General Died at Dawn."

John Carradine—Thinnest man in Hollywood, Carradine used to declaim Hamlet to an empty Hollywood Bowl. In "The Prisoner of Shark Island" he started a series of hit performances.

Gale Sondergaard—Well-known stage actress, she was the brightest acting spot in "Anthony Adverse" and established herself as the screen's leading attractive menace.

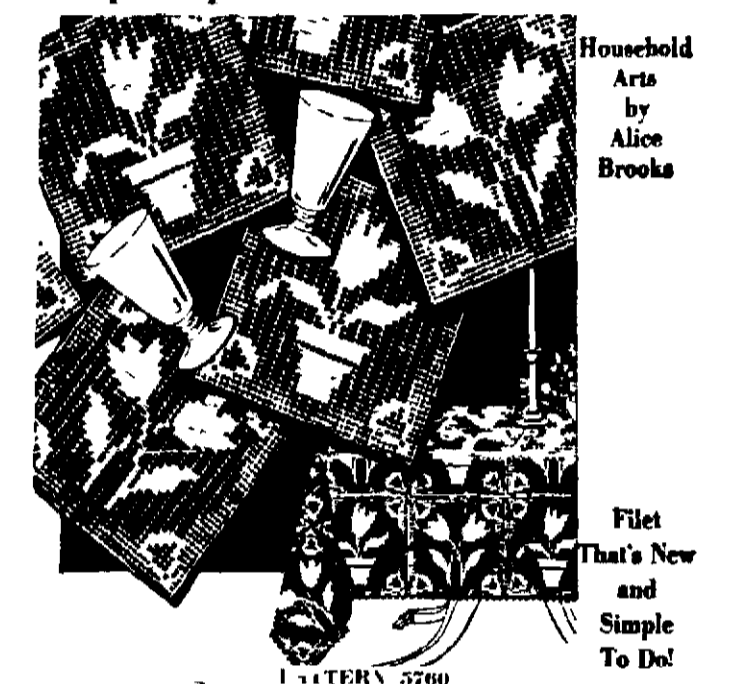

J. Edward Bromberg—Imported from the stage, he scored in "The Crime of Dr. Forbes" and lesser roles.

Eduardo Cianelli—Also from the stage, Cianelli menaced into "Winter Set" a great deal of the vitality it has.

Shakespearean Star

Fritz Leiber—The noted Shakespearean star did a small role in "A Tale of Two Cities," scored decidedly in "The Story of Louis Pasteur," and went on from there.

YOU'RE JUDGED BY YOUR LETTERS

Why make such a chore of letter-writing, Alice? It's really just as easy as talking, once you get the hang of it.

Of course, your way of writing letters is hard. You tug and push your words around, keep out words you use in talking, drag in words you're not on speaking terms with. The result is unnatural and unappealing.

"I regret to inform you that I have not yet paid a call to your friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bolton. The weather has been terrible. I have been indisposed with a cold."

No warmth! No personality! And you start with an apology. Tear it up and begin "talking" on paper.

"That last jolly letter did me worlds of good."

"I'm practically marooned by snowdrifts and a bad case of sniffles. So I haven't been around to see your amazing friends, the Boltons. I shall—cross my heart—soon be a member of the family."

March better! Write on your nearest stationery with the neat monogram check satisfaction and ring with the correct forms in our 40-page booklet. How to Write Letters for all Occasions. Time, sample letters, too, for letters of friendship, congratulation, sympathy, invitation, love letters.

600 at Holy Name Communion Here

Richard Greene, Thomas Gorham, John Clarke.

Father Kennedy celebrated the communion Mass, and, in his sermon to the society, praised the Holy Name men for their splendid turnout, manifesting their faith, and urged them to carry out the pledge of the organization to honor the name of Jesus and discourse profanity. At the communion of the Mass, Dean Stanley led the men in recitation of the pledge.

After the church services, the Holy Name men marched to the school hall for the breakfast prepared by Mrs. Perry and Robert Rice, two ex-army cooks, and John McGuire. In making up the meal the culinary department handled 800 eggs, 100 pounds of ham, 1,500 rolls and 20 pounds of coffee. A committee of members served the breakfast, taking care of the large gathering in less than 40 minutes.

The committee, directed by Leo Murphy, general chairman, consisted of the following men:

C. Perry, R. Rice, M. Noble, B. Boyle, M. Hart, E. Hanley, T. Hart, J. Hoffman, N. Noonan, E. Britt, W. Long, J. Sullivan, H. Golnek, J. Finn, J. Enlist, C. Crautz, H. Golnek, Jr., J. Norton, Leo Lynch, S. Wells, R. Matthews, George Haley, E. Appa, G. Riley, J. McGuire, J. M. Murphy, J. Graney, F. Graney, L. Straley, P. Gilday.

Opening the program in the school hall, President Gustav Kogel, serving his second term as head of the Holy Name, congratulated the members for their fine turnout at communion and the breakfast, stressing the bonds between the Holy Name and the Catholic Church itself, urging the men to be practical and active in discharging the duties of both.

President Kogel presented Joseph F. Sullivan, past president, as toastmaster, and in his opening remarks he encouraged the men to be regular in attendance at communion with the Holy Name every month. "Such gatherings should be encouraged," he said, "even insisted upon. Let us try every month to have a similar demonstration."

Dean Stanley, commenting on the recitation of the Holy Name pledge in church, said, "It was very edifying to hear you men respond to the pledge in such strong tones, indicating a determination to carry out the words." He urged them to be active Holy Name men throughout the ensuing year.

Before introducing Dean Connolly as the next speaker, Toastmaster Sullivan praised the heads of the police, fire and postal departments on the fine representation at the breakfast, and said he desired to publicly thank the non-Catholics of the departments who relieved their co-workers so that they might attend communion with the society and the breakfast.

Dean Connolly in his talk on "The Power of the Holy Name," said, "A name is something more than a word and a word is a thing of power." He repeated some of the names in history and the pride patriots take in uttering them. "Yet, how insignificant their emotion," he said, "compared with that holy pride which stirs every true Catholic heart in pronouncing the Holy Name of the savior spoken reverently. The name Jesus is an act of the deepest divine worship."

"Jesus—speak the word, and you have made an act of faith. You have professed your belief in Him who taught men the way of salvation. You have acknowledged that he is the way, the truth and the life. You have yielded the homage of your intellect to Him who had the power and the right to teach men the things of God. You have accepted Him completely not only acknowledging Him your master but willingly drinking in every doctrine He has taught, every truth that He has proposed, every moral teaching that He has inculcated."

"Speak the word reverently and you have made an act of hope, your soul is raised above the struggling, toiling strife and enabled to look into the very courts of Heaven. Drear indeed would be this world and dreary the journey in this life if not for that name."

"The name of Jesus therefore is a name of power and glory, a profession of faith, a cry of hope and an acknowledgment of love. Jesus of Nazareth, King of my heart should be our slogan in the battle of life and shall be the pass word at the gates of eternity."

Father Patrick McGowan in his discourse played Communism, calling it the cynicism of brutality, atheism and disbelief in faith. "A Communist is the worst thing a man can be called," he said.

Describing the Communist as a snake in the grass, Father McGowan said, "You will find him everywhere, in the high places and in the low places, at the foot of the professor's chair in universities and in your workshops, distilling poison and waiting for the moment to strike and destroy."

Prize the Holy Name men to fight the influence of Communism at every opportunity, the priest concluded: "What is the purpose of Communism? Its supporters preach an attractive doctrine that appeals to the stomach of the half-educated and the parents of the half-educated child and the husband of the wife enslaved by drudgery, urging him to take sides against the millionaire with all the enjoyments of life."

"But, if the Communist's aim is to fight the wrongs of society, to destroy the evils of industrial and commercial life, as it claims, and to bring about a better government, the church should join its hand, Communism, however, has an aim more universal. It strikes at God and Christianity. It would must go, the church must go and with it, the Communist must go. It is only parasites on society. The aim of Communism is the destruction of Christian civilization. We must be alert to oppose it."

Then, since the war, the world is in a state, wanting to go somewhere, but not knowing where. Communism proposes to remedy the evils of society, but the remedy offered is worse than the evil. There is only one remedy.

edy, that offered by the Catholic Church.

"The Church says the employer needs the employee and the employee needs the employer. They should be bound together so that one feels he is a part of the other and the fruits of labor distributed according to justice and charity."

Father McGowan pointed out that the Church dictates not the form of government a country should have like Communism does. "The government should be for the people not the people for the government," he said. "In Communist countries we find the citizen for the state. He is the chattel of society and has no rights except what the state gives him. Is that the democracy of our America?"

Referring to the conflict in Spain as a product of Communism, the speaker urged the Holy Name men to take heed to the Pope's Christmas message to "unite to stop this red wave which seeks to dethrone God and our civilization the fruit of Christianity."

"You have your hand on the pulse of the world in your daily contacts," Father McGowan told the men. "Be alert and well informed Catholics ready to show the evils of the remedies offered by Communism."

Father Kennedy spoke briefly repeating the congratulatory remarks he used in church and urged the Holy Name men to keep up their interest in the society and their religion during the year.

Dean Connolly offered prayer to close the breakfast and the proceedings closed.

Local Shrine Head Highly Honored

Fred L. Van Deusen, president of the Kingston Shrine Association, is a very happy Shriner as he is kept busy receiving congratulations over the very successful ball the Shrine held Friday evening for the benefit of the Industrial Home and also because the Potentate of Cyprus Temple, Order of the Mystical Shrine, Albany, and members of his divan who attended the ball officially notified him that he had been honored Tauradara evening at the annual meeting of Cyprus Temple by being unanimously elected representative to the Imperial Council to be held in Detroit, Mich., this June.

To be elected representative is a signal honor and one much sought after by many of the 3000 members of Cyprus Temple and shows the high standing which the Kingston Shrine enjoys in Albany.

All the local Shrine members are happy that Mr. Van Deusen has again received this honor as in 1934 he was elected representative to the Imperial Council in Minneapolis, Minn.

Two Star Trackmen Found for Season

New York, Jan. 11 (AP)—The winter track season, only two meets old, already has produced two athletes who may be heard from a few more times before the board-pounding season is over.

In the outdoor Sugar Bowl meet at New Orleans in December 17, was Wayne Rideout of North Texas Teachers' College, who stole the show, aided by his twin brother, Blaine. He not only conquered Indian's Don Lash in his specialty, the two mile run, but led it in the time second only to the 8:58.3 Lash turned in at Princeton last year.

At the opening indoor meet Saturday at the Columbus Council, Knights of Columbus, games in Brooklyn, a Columbia University sophomore, Herb West, outshined Lash and other famous performers by running 100 meters in 10.6 seconds for a world indoor record. West's remarkable performance clipped a full fifth of a second from the record.

Lash came back from his New Orleans defeat to win the 3,000 meters in the fast time of 8:31.4, only six seconds slower than Spani Nurm's indoor record.

Glenn Cunningham again proved his superiority to Gene Veneke in the 800 meter feature, beating him by some six meters in 1:35.4. They're likely to provide further excitement this winter in mile and 1,500 meter duels.

Baseball's Early Birds in Asking For Salary Increases

New York, Jan. 11 (AP)—Contract difficulties between ball players and big league clubs for the most part, apparently will be amicably settled this year before the annual training camp migration starts.

Some of the early birds in making flat wage demands already have come around.

Bob Feller, Cleveland's smoke-ball sensation, said he wanted $20,000 for his first full season in the majors, but signed during the week-end for about half that figure.

Not a cloud appears on the horizon for the National League Champion New York Giants, who handed out pay boosts all down the line.

The World Champion Yankees may have some difficulty with Lefty Gomez, who can't see a salary cut from the $20,000 he received last season.

For a time it seemed the Yanks might also have trouble with Joe Di Maggio, who put in a bid for $20,000, compared with the $8,500 he was reported to have received for 1936. However, the word that Joe settled for something between $13,500 and $15,000.

Outfielder Jake Powell, batting hero of the world series, and pitcher Red Ruffing, who received some $12,000 for his fine 1936 season, are possible protesters.

In the ballwrecks of Cincinnati's Reds and Philadelphia's Athletics, contracts are pouring in without a break. However, Connie Mack still has to hear from Bob Johnson and Wally Moses.

WHAT THIS COUNTRY NEEDS

Dingell Says It's Nickel Beer, Tells Why

Washington, Jan. 11 (AP)—Rep. Dingell (D-Mich.) set out today to bring back beer at a nickel a mug. He proposed to cut the beer tax from 35 to 25 cents a barrel.

"We aren't selling nearly the beer we did before prohibition," he said. "A tax reduction would mean increased sales by the brewers, a lowering of the retail price, benefits to consumers, more orders for barrel staves from Arkansas and hops from middle western farmers."

BOMBERS TAKE CIVILIAN TOLL

Moroccan Trouble Cast Upon France

He said a new note was ready for delivery to the Spanish insurgent high commissioner Teuani, Spanish Morocco, declaring explicitly that landing of large bodies of German troops would be the signal for French invasion of the Spanish zone.

Officials in Berlin denied knowledge of the reported German infiltration and the press countercharged in big headlines: "Secret intention of French general staff! Annexation of Spanish Morocco planned!"

While the international atmosphere, already troubled by the Spanish civil war, was clouded further by the German press attacks on France, cabinet ministers cut short their vacations and rushed to the capital.

The new note, it was said, again would call attention to the new barracks at Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, and warn that if they were filled with Nazis, German Moroccan troops would immediately move to eject the Germans.

Under the general staff plans, it was reported, the Spanish zone could be occupied in 36 hours by a vast combined maneuver of land, sea and air forces.

Troops on March

Algerian troops were reported on the march to join the Moroccan garrison already swollen from 40,000 to 100,000—a colorful array of regulars, Foreign Legionnaires and Moors.

Extraordinary activity has been reported in the air force. It was known at least 30 planes have been flown from France to Morocco in the last fortnight.

The combined British and French fleets were massing off the Moroccan coast, prepared "if needed" to aid in the expedition.

Native troops, it was indicated, would carry out the first operations with French troops being called from the homeland to garrison French Morocco.

Special reserve forces, one report said, would be called out in France to man the Maginot line of fortifications on the Franco-German border, with British troops filling in the blank files if necessary. This, it was emphasized, would be precautionary and would not involve "general mobilization."

The measures for joint European defense were reported to have been worked out last week in a conference between Defense Minister Edouard Daladier and British War Secretary Alfred Duff-Cooper.

Government quarters expressed fears a campaign in the German press presaged not only a delay in enforcement of any ban on volunteers to Spain, but a possible new coup by Reichschancellor Adolf Hitler.

Berlin reports France was seeking conquest of Morocco to aid the Spanish government were denounced by a government source as "fantastic."

Highest Chiefs Summoned

London, Jan. 11 (AP)—Britain's highest naval chiefs were summoned to the foreign office to discuss empire strength in the Mediterranean today after the government was reported to have received information concerning "a certain amount of German activity" in Spanish Morocco.

Simultaneously, authoritative sources disclosed four ranking admirals have been called to Gibraltar in advance of a British naval concentration around the fortified gateway.

First Lord of the Admiralty Sir Samuel Hoare and Admiral of the Fleet Sir Erle Charles Chatfield conferred with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden on the Spanish and Moroccan situations.

British representatives in North Africa were instructed to send full reports of alleged German incursions into Spanish Morocco.

Informal sources asserted, however, arrival of Nazi troops near Ceuta could not be confirmed. Some suggested the Germans might be mining engineers loaned to Spanish insurgent General Francisco Franco.

The meeting of Admirals at Gibraltar was given increased significance by the reported presence of Lieutenant-General Sir Charles P. H. Morgan, governor of Malta, Britain's central Mediterranean naval base.

While London coupled the meeting of the admirals with the return to London of Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin to meet his cabinet, Great Britain again took the lead in a desperate attempt to keep Spain's civil war within the peninsula.

Included plans an absolute ban on shipment of war materiel on either side and dispatched a new note to Germany threatening them in 1944.

Would Plug Volunteers

The British note, sent to its ambassadors at Berlin, Rome, Moscow, Paris and Lisbon, sought to plug the stream of volunteers to Spain without waiting for the slow-moving efforts of the non-intervention committee.

In effect, Britain demanded that interested powers stop intervention at once, if they are sincere in their professed desires to do so.

Officials were optimistic there would be no flat turn downs, but some sources said cutting off British volunteers and asking others to follow suit would only be England's hands while permitting other nations to continue pouring volunteers into the "little world war."

It was regarded as unlikely Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany would be favorably inclined to the new posture. He set out definite conditions for his participation in any non-intervention scheme in answering a previous demand.

Rome was expected to act in close harmony with Berlin, but here the complicated picture took a strange turn. The important political review of H. Merlo emphasized that Italy was not favorably inclined to having Germany established as a power on the Mediterranean through Moroccan influence.

Agree to Ban

France, government sources said, already had agreed to the ban on volunteers and was devoting her attention to the reported influx of Germans into Morocco.

Her Atlantic and Mediterranean fleets were steaming to the troubled waters near Gibraltar.

Authorities held secret the measure of cooperation promised France but the conference of admirals was regarded as bearing on the situation.

Present at the meeting were Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, commander-in-chief of the Mediterranean fleet; Vice-Admiral Geoffrey Blake, his second in command; Rear Admiral Charles Edward Kennedy-Purvis, commander of the British fleet in Spanish waters, and Rear Admiral James Murray Phipps, admiral-superintendent of Gibraltar.

Under their command and that of Admiral Sir Roger R. C. Backhouse, commander-in-chief of the home fleet, Britain will mass 94 of her mightiest men-of-war which, with the combined French fleets of more than 70 ships, will form one of the greatest naval concentrations since the World War.

Pains in Legs Recur to Pope

Vatican City, Jan. 11 (AP)—Pope Pius is suffering from recurring pain in his right leg where varicose veins, similar to those in his partly paralyzed left leg, have developed. Vatican sources reported today.

The 78-year-old Holy Father passed several bad hours last night, prelates declared, when sedatives administered to relieve the pain were off.

Dr. Amintore Milani, the Pontiff's physician, was summoned and remained at the Pope's bedside for several hours before his patient's pain was eased. The attack was followed by another period of depression, officials said.

Later, the Pope heard Mass and received Cardinal Pacelli, Papal secretary of state, and undersecretary Cardinal Pizzardi.
